I think AAA is a great concept, and given what turned out with respect to FDA, reasonable people will have a difficult time making a coherent argument that AAA is not a better alternative than FDA regulation.

But the thought occurs to me, that developing and executing legislative strategy for the sole purpose of satisfying an independent auditor we've hired is a dumb reason to develop and execute legislative strategies.

I think the liklihood of security breaches is small but is there. I honestly do not think that we take any greater risk by video/teleconferencing on these issues than we take in working with the public in the first place.
I'd suggest you try it if you feel comfortable, and depending on the nature of the information/participation, you decide then whether to continue.

Did I read that memo to say that this is not secure? If that is the case, we surely do not want to use
